WEEK 45 · IN REVIEW

2–6 NOV 2026

EASTFRONTIER

5

stories that led the week in China AI

eastfrontier.com

Swipe →

EASTFRONTIER

Alibaba's Qwen Will Power Apple Intelligence in China From December

Apple says developers can test its China AI features from November 4, with Qwen built into Siri, Writing Tools and Visual Intelligence in iOS 27.3.

eastfrontier.com

EASTFRONTIER

Taiwan Weighs 10-Year Prison Terms for Unlicensed AI Chip Exports to China

A draft amendment heard on November 2 would also punish shipments routed through third countries, a gap that left a Nvidia server case without export charges.

eastfrontier.com

DeepSeek Will Pre-Train V5 on Huawei's Ascend Chips, Reports Say

Cailian Press said V5 would use the Ascend 950 as its core training chip, with the project pointing to 2027; Ascend has so far mainly run inference.

EASTFRONTIER

Oracle Cancels Tencent's US$7 Billion AI Chip Lease Under US Pressure

The five-year deal would have given Tencent up to 100,000 advanced AI chips in Southeast Asian data centers, its largest overseas compute lease.

EASTFRONTIER

China Bars SoftBank From Taking Over ABB's Robot Business in China

ABB says China's foreign investment security review has prohibited the China part of SoftBank's US$5.375 billion purchase of its robotics division.

eastfrontier.com

WEEK 45 · IN REVIEW

EASTFRONTIER

Every lead story, every Monday

The Weekly Brief lands in your inbox on Mondays at 07:30 SGT.

eastfrontier.com/subscribe

Link in the first comment